

Abstract of the Disclosure

A planter of which the base and plant receptacle are made from one single stone and when assembled maintain the outward appearance and integrity of the original natural stone, said plant receptacle portion being slightly elevated above the base, thereby 5 allowing air flow between the base and plant receptacle.